LONDON, SATURDAY, September 11, 1731. NUMB. LXXIV.

The Reasonableness of writing in Defence of the Government, against the absurd and mischievous Clamours of the Craftsman and his Party.

THE Craftsman and his Auxiliaries have continually made it their Business, next to the arraigning and condemning the Ministry, to arraign and condemn all those who have made themselves the Advocates in its Cause; they have represented them as dull, mercenary, trifling, and inconsistent; they have stil'd them the Friends of Oppression, the Flatterers of Vice, the Tools of Government, and the Enemies of their Country: They have taken infinite Pains to make them contemptible in the Eye of the Publick, and have done their utmost to stifle all the Evidence that was not in their Favour.——On the other Hand, they have made a Weekly Boast of their own Popularity, printed Letter upon Letter in their own Praise, and voted themselves Patriots with all the Assurance and Vanity of Pretenders.

These Methods have been taken to gain themselves a favourable Hearing from their Idol the People, and throw an Odium on their Antagonists; to excite a Prepossession in the Jury on their Side of the Question, and prevent, if possible, all Attention to the other.——Whether their Artifice has succeeded, I'll consider at another Opportunity; at present, I shall only prove that, whatever the Craftsman may have advanc'd to the contrary, 'tis as reasonable to defend the Government as oppose it, and absolutely necessary for the Publick to examine both Sides before they determine on either.——Audi alteram Partem is the Motto of almost every Town-Hall in England, and, if that Maxim is absolutely just and necessary in the most trifling Causes, who shall presume to declare Sentence on the Conduct of a Ministry, without knowing the whole of the Debate, or attending to what naturally rises in their Favour? Yet, such is the Absurdity of the misguided Many, such the Levity of their Hearts, their Proneness to relish, their Eagerness to condemn, their Fondness of Change, and the Confusion that would follow it, that, impell'd by their Ignorance, they rush at once into the Secrets of State, compliment one another as profound Politicians, and censure in a Moment what Prudence and Wisdom would deliberate upon for Years, and tremble at last to condemn, for Fear of a Mistake.——But we'll examine this Affair more particularly, nor be guilty ourselves of what we complain of in others.——The Craftsman asserts that, by the natural Rights of an Englishman, he is at full Liberty to speak and write freely; to examine the Conduct of Ministers, and accuse or condemn at Discretion; to denounce the Resentment of the People against the Guilty, and keep the Innocent themselves in Awe of Transgression; to assert and maintain the Privileges of the People, and confine the Prerogative to its proper Bounds.——These are his most popular Topicks in their best Light, without the personal Reflections, invidious Slanders, self-interested Motives, and base Misrepresentations that are the Gross of his Materials, and have done him the most Service with the Vulgar: Yet even these are such Topicks as may be us'd in any Reign alike, and never will be controverted, because undeniably true.——'Tis not a Question whether he has us'd them out of Principle, or only to serve a particular Turn; Mr. D'Anvers has not one Feature of Integrity to recommend him, and all these noble Whig-Maxims are prostituted to the worst Purposes; they are made the Tools for Disaffection and Resentment to work with, the Masque of Truth to give Credit to the Party, the Lure to inveigle the Simple, and the Shadow of Reason to confound the Wise.——Now the Principles of his Adversaries, thus far however, happen to be just the same; we differ only in the Application, and what makes him turbulent and seditious, teaches us Gratitude and Obedience. Being at full Liberty to write and speak freely, we think there can be no Cause to complain of Oppression; Guilt and Power would immediatly destroy the Liberty they were afraid of, and Innocence can never be aw'd by what it does not fear: We are full of Gratitude for the Continuation of our Privileges, and can never apprehend a Stretch of Prerogative, when 'tis exercis'd with all the Lenity and Gentleness imaginable.——To this may be added, farther to our Advantage, that, tho' we are naturally free, we are unwilling to abuse that Freedom, or forfeit what was intrusted to our Care by our Fore-fathers, and is intail'd on our Children; that we are sensible of the real Happiness which results to the Community from the present Establishment, and are fearful to disturb it; we would be good Subjects to be Friends to the Common-Wealth, and would be greatly cautious how we troubled its Repose: We are justly afraid of licentious Opposition, and undistinguishing Invectives; Faction is like what is fabled of the Devil, easy to raise, but hard to lay; and we would not be instrumental to a Mischief we could not cure.——The present State-Malady is only imaginary, and the Remedy would be worse than the Disease, even if 'twas real; our political Empericks would persuade us the Constitution is out of Order, that they may be fee'd for the Cure.——But we add that Misfortune to Plague, Pestilence, and Famine in our Litany, with a good Lord deliver us from all.——It must be remembred our Government is a Species between a Monarchy and Republick; if the Craftsman and his Party guard against the Incroachments of the first, we make it our Business to prevent the Confusion of the last; one Part of the Constitution has as much Need of an Advocate as the other: If we do our Endeavours to keep the Balance even, we do the Duty of Englishmen as well as they, and have as much Title to Popularity and Reputation.——To oppose the Designs of Faction, is as meritorious as to distress a Tyrant, and, where the Case is so plain on our Side, and so false on theirs, it does not require a Moment to determine who is the truest Friend to the Publick, or ought to be highest in its Favour.——Nothing but Tyranny admits of an Opposition; while the Laws are executed in their proper Channel, without Violence or Partiality, a good Subject can never complain, and a bad one is not to be regarded; the Charge of Tyranny can never justly be brought against any Part of the present Administration, and consequently 'tis Faction only that complains.——If Faction complains, 'tis unjustly; whatever is unjust is injurious to the Constitution, and whatever is injurious to the Constitution every particular Member is oblig'd to withstand to the utmost of his Power.——Now let the Publick consider whether we are the Tools of the State, or the Friends of the Constitution; whether 'tis not nobler to preserve the Peace of a Society, than to destroy it; whether 'tis not just to guard against the Craft and Insolence of Faction, and support one Part of the Constitution when 'tis invaded by another; whether 'tis not necessary to examine both Sides before we proceed to a Verdict, and whether the good Subject is not always to be preferr'd to the Incendiary.——I need not say any more on this Head, 'tis too obvious to be deny'd, and too just to be confuted.

Another Part of the heinous Charge against us is, that we are absolutely devoted, inlisted Slaves to a certain Great Man, and that we write and speak and think agreeably to his Instructions and Commands.——'Tis but Right to do the Great Man and ourselves Justice even in this Point too; 'tis most notorious he has been abus'd as the Author of many Things he never saw, and we have been complimented with many Honours that we never receiv'd; were that noble Personage sufficiently at Leisure, or did he think it worth his while to enter the Lists with his Enemies, like Homer's Achilles, they would soon know him to their Confusion; he has never yet appear'd but Victory attended him, and they have abundant Reason to dread the Genius that has been every where their Superior.——In the mean while, 'tis scandalously mean and base to insult him with the Frailties and indiscreet Zeal of Persons he is intirely a Stranger to.——His Merit will always make him Friends, but his Friends will not be always equal to his Merit.

For my Part I solemnly declare that all I publish is intirely my own, without the Instruction, Assistance, or Privity of any Person whatever; I only am answerable for their Faults, and, if they are expos'd by my Enemies, I'll make Use of their Criticisms to amend for the future; I am fully persuaded of the Goodness of my Cause, and need no other Consideration to inspire me with as much Spirit to support it, as is within the Compass of my Capacity: If my Adversaries have more, let them blush that they abuse it in opposing their Country, and that the Honesty of my Intentions gives even me the Advantage.——

But 'tis farther asserted, that the Advocates for the Government are intirely base and worthless; that we are void of all Wit, Knowledge, or Honesty, and that all such as have either, decline the Service, or engage on the other Side.——This is a bold Charge on the Literati in general, and the worst Compliment that could have been made them; to say that Wit and Knowledge are wedded to Disloyalty, is an Affront to both, and what is not in the Power of Honesty to comply with at all.——As much of this grievous Charge as falls to my Share I'll do my Endeavour to answer, and I leave the rest to those who are concern'd as well as I, in Confidence that a full Defence may be more in their Power than mine: Let them make use of the Wit and Knowledge that I mayn't be Master of, to refute this Accusation, and, my Honesty shall support me in the mean Time: By that I'll convince Mr. D'Anvers that I understand what is brave or generous as well as he, and practise it as much; that I hold Liberty as dear, and am as greatly concern'd for the Constitution; that I understand the Manners of a Gentleman, and the Character of a Writer as perfectly; that I hate Slavishness and Dependency as much, and am interested as sincerely for the Glory of the British Name; that I scorn an infamous Attachment any where, and make my Judgment the Rule of my Conduct; that I am determin'd by Things, and not by Persons; and that Justice only fix'd me in Favour of the Administration I have attempted to defend.

A finishing Stroke to the Annotations on Mr. BOWMAN's Sermon, in a Letter to Mother BAVIUS (publish'd last Week in the Grub-street Journal) Paraphras'd in Rhyme.

See clumsy ORTHODOXO lay a Claim to Wit,
From puzzled Prose in BOWMAN's Disprais'e writ.
Grub. Journal, Sept. 2. Page 3.

HE says, that all the holy Tricks
And pious Frauds of Catholics,
Confessedly, were first set up
To raise the Clergy Cock-a-hoop ——
Confessedly? —— a Blockhead! what
For God's Sake can he mean by that?
That should b'apply'd to People who
We're speaking of, not speaking to.
Lo here! how, ev'n in Language common,
Extreamly ignorant is BOWMAN!
Yet greater far his Ign'rance seems
(There being great and small Extreams)
In all he writes on —— for the Sot
Cou'd never understand what's what.
But by his Gaping we may guess
His Meaning, which no Doubt is this:
" That we condemn the popish Cheat,
" And yet affect a Power as great."
When 'tis all Men's (but his) Opinion,
That Church-men covet not Dominion;
But daily imitate our SAVIOUR
In modest, humble, meek Behaviour.
He begs the Question like a Brute,
So I'll say nothing farther to't.
When he affirms, in Manner odd,
" Sufficient is the Word of God";
Means he, that our Creator wou'd
Speak plainly, to be understood?
That he so gracious is, to shew t'ye
What is and what is not your Duty?
If Management like this is right,
No Priest can get a Living by't.
But this false Brother too has taught ye
" That some Enthusiasts rich and haughty
" Have stil'd themselves, tho' small their Worth,
" Spiritual Princes of the Earth."
By these, 'tis evident, he means
Their Reverend Lordships and the Deans:
But I can tell him that I know
None who themselves entitle so:
'Tis true such Titles they have got,
Tho' how they came by'm first —— God wot!
But haughty and enthusiastick
Are Names for which he merits a Stick.
And Nota bene here, that he
Finds Names to call, as well as we.
" And do these pious Reverend Tories
" Marr God's Commands, with OLD WIVES Stories?
" Why yes," quoth he. And I reply,
'Tis a damn'd, stupid, bare-fac'd Lye!
And I can prove, where'er I please,
He knows not what a Story is:
Indeed I've something else to do,
Than all his Nonsense to pursue.
But notwithstanding what is past,
He condescends to own, at last,
" That Preachers may be sent, forsooth!
" To propagate the Gospel Truth."
If so —— I marvel with what Face he
Can rail against Episcopacy:
And how (I fain would be inform'd)
Shall Priest with holy Zeal well warm'd
Keep Men from Ills that might betide 'em,
Except they let him mount and ride 'em?

Says he, " Our Clergy having read,
" That laying Hands upon the Head
" Was an old Apoſtolic Cuſtom,
" Wou'd fain perſuade ye — if you'll truſt them,
" That they're a Sort of Demi-Gods
" 'Twixt whom and us there's ſo much Odds."
Why not? ſay I, —— when Ordination
You own's an Apoſtolic Faſhion:
And Apoſtolic and Divine
Some learned Clerks alike define.
That Ceremony therefore may ——
Nay muſt, —— Divinity convey.
He adds, " Now from this Inſtitution,
" Our Clergy draw a fine Concluſion.
" Id eſt, Becauſe in Days of Yore,
" The Thing was practis'd o'er and o'er,
" (Tho' no Command to keep it up,
" Was ever given) —— if it ſhou'd drop;
" The Church, of courſe, muſt tumble too:"
And pray Sir is not this all true?
Yes —— Many doughty Authors prove it;
But as for my Part —— I'm above it.
Now, tho' he knows we cannot bear it, he
Puts us in mind of Chriſtian Charity.
Meer Cant! provoking, dull and ſpiteful!
Sure Sign his Heart's of Malice quite full.
Thus un-burnt Hereticks deviſe
The Churches Babes to ſtigmatize.
Sucklings and Babes, the Goſpel ſays,
Long ſince ſhould ſound the Churches Praiſe.
That " Ordination was intended
" To hold out till the World was ended
" He cannot grant." And pray take Notice
For what Cauſe he denies that ſo 'tis.
" Whatever the Good-men of Old
" Intended ſhou'd for ever hold,
" Wou'd not have been with Ambiguity
" Expreſt, but th' utmoſt Perſpicuity.
" They'd not convey to us by Halves,
" The beſt Receipts to make Soul-Salves.
" Nor will a Legiſlator good
" Give Laws that can't be underſtood;
" And yet, if People diſobey,
" Damn 'em for ever and for aye."
What ſtupid ſenſeleſs Cant is here?
Shou'd Laws divine be plain and clear
Becauſe, forſooth! that God is good?
Lord help the Clergy! if they ſhou'd!
" Diſſenters here, Churches beyond Seas,
" And Scotland's Kirk, he fondly fancies,
" Are Proofs that Ordination never
" Was clearly 'njoin'd to laſt for ever."
And might not I, to ſhew his Vanity,
Object the like againſt Chriſtianity?
For ev'n in England many are,
Who think it not extreamly clear,
That one is three, and three but one;
Tho' 'tis as obvious as the Sun.
He grants, " That when 'twas inſtituted
" The Thing might well enough be ſuited
" To Circumſtances." —— But I query,
When did thoſe Circumſtances vary?
Dares he reply —— Epiſcopacy
Has reign'd too long when Prieſts grow ſaucy?
Moſt ignorantly then he prates
Of Church's Power, and eke the State's;
For Anſwer —— Let him read my Brothers
Sanderſon, Bramhall, and ſome others.
He deems, that nothing's requiſite
To make a Man of God compleat,
But Piety and Learning; which are
Sufficient to ſet up a Preacher:
Adding with a ſchiſmatic Scoff;
" Do Ignorance and Sin march off
" And take their ſhorteſt Way down Stairs,
" When'er the Biſhop's Cap appears?"
No, I'll be ſworn, friend Bowman never;
For thou'rt as ſad a Dog, as ever!
I might go on to quote (dear Mother!)
With here — one Word — and there — another —
And Sentences — without Connexion —
(For Paragraphs entire perplex one;)
But faith, I think that here's enough
Of ſuch confounded blund'ring Stuff!
And that it ſcarce can be a Query,
If even you yourſelf are weary.
And now I'll ask ye — Speak your Conſcience!
Have I not heap'd a Load of Nonſenſe,
Damn'd Lyes, and Impudence uncommon,
Upon this Infidel WILL BOWMAN?
I'll ſay no more — but only add
Some Verſes that will make him mad.

No Power, thou ſayſt, is to the Clergy given,
To puniſh thoſe who guide themſelves to Heaven.
This ROGUE-Opinion, and the Holy Bible
Turn'd, by thy Commentaries — to a Libel,
Has in ſuch Ferment put us, that not little
Has been th' Expence of holy Foam and Spittle.
Thou Dog! we cry, thou vile abandon'd Wretch!
What Hag of Lancaſhire did thee bewitch?
What Dev'l poſſeſt thee rather —— to wage battle
So impiouſly againſt the Lord's Black-Cattle?
Thus we in Wrath — But when we'd eas'd our Paſſion,
We found the Scrub not worth our Indignation.
And having vented Billingſgate in vain,
Our Foam and Spittle we lick'd up again.
For ſince we wanted Pow'r —— to ſacrifice him,
It was but prieſtly Prudence to deſpiſe him.

To the AUTHOR of the WEEKLY REGISTER.

SIR,

THIS Day I read your Paper, and it hath been with no ſmall Pleaſure that I have read it for ſome Time paſt. And tho' the Task you have undertaken ſeems to be a Labour in vain, that is, Braying a Pack of Fools in a Mortar, alias anſwering the Grub-ſtreet Journal; yet it muſt, and always will, be a Diverſion to ſee Dunces laſh'd altho' they remain incorrigible: For which Reaſon I now put in for the Place of your Uſher, and therefore deſire you to inſert in your next the following Epigram, as a Motto to ſome future Pieces I deſign to ſend you.

I am, Your humble Servant,
MOROMASTIX.

Cinna vult videri pauper, & eſt pauper.
MARTIAL.

Applied to the Grub-ſtreet Journal.

Cinna affects to wear a Beggar's Cloaths,
And is the very Beggar that he ſhows:
So Grub-ſtreet Journaliſts are found in fact
To be the Dunces they'd be thought to act.

To the AUTHOR of the WEEKLY REGISTER.

WHereas it hath been inſerted in the Papers, that the Loſs by the late dreadful Fire in Tiverton amounted to little more than L. 56000, we think it proper to inform the Publick of the true State of the ſaid Loſs, which is as under.

On the loweſt Valuation of the Houſes and Goods burnt, in the Condition they were in before the ſaid Fire. } 56055 : 04 : 9

But if the Charge of rebuilding that Part of the Town which is burnt, and reſtoring Things to the Condition they were in before the ſaid Fire, be conſider'd (as it hath been by other Places) the Loſs thereby would be far exceeding L. 100,000; which falls wholly on the Town, L. 1135 excepted, being all that can be recover'd by any Inſurances.

A large handſome Market-houſe, not many Years ſince built, and a very ſpacious Fleſh-Shambles. } 2000

The Profits of theſe Buildings were weekly laid out in Bread, and diſtributed to near 150 aged poor People, in Six-penny Loaves, which they enjoyed for their Lives, and muſt loſe, until Means can be found to rebuild the ſame.

An Alms-houſe for nine poor People, with a Chapel. } 200

The neceſſary Charge of ſubſiſting the Inhabitants, until they can be reſtored to Houſes and Conveniences of carrying on their Trade, cannot be computed at leſs than L. 20,000; the Number of Inhabitants burned out of their Houſes being at leaſt 2000: And what renders this Charge and Calamity the greater, is that ſuch poor Inhabitants are crowded together, and the Small-Pox is thereby increaſed amongſt them, and become very malignant and mortal.

A particular Valuation of the above-mention'd Loſs may be ſeen at Mr. Cooper's, Goldſmith, in the Strand; and whatſoever Charity ſhall be left with him will be faithfully diſtributed by the Perſons under-named, who are Truſtees appointed by the Sufferers to receive and diſtribute all Charities for their Relief.

The ſame Day a private Centinel of the Foot-Guards was whipt on the Parade in St. James's-Park, as he had been the two preceding Guard-Days, purſuant to his Sentence at a Court-Martial, for going to Publick Houſes and cheating them of the Reckonings, and divers other Crimes: He was afterwards drumm'd out of the Regiment with a Halter about his Neck. When he was got to Charing-Croſs, where the Serjeant deliver'd him out of Cuſtody, he was ſeized by a Conſtable, on a Charge of having three Wives, but knocking down the Conſtable, and the Mob favouring him, he made his Eſcape. Hawkins insulted him and gave him some Blows, whereupon the Jury found him guilty of the Indictment, and the Court order'd him to pay five Pounds for Fine and Costs.

At the said Sessions one Martin, a pretended Fugitive, was brought to the Bar of the Court to be clear'd, pursuant to a late Act of Parliament for insolvent Debtors, &c. but several Persons appearing to prove he was not out of the Kingdom during the Time limited in the said Act, notwithstanding his Pretences and Affidavit, the Court thought proper to give Directions that he the said Martin be prosecuted to the utmost Severity, as the said Act directs in such Cases.

On the 1st Inst. was brought into that Port by four of their Cruizers, a British Ship named the Neptune, William Wilson Master, which they took in her Voyage from Lisbon for Hamburgh. They did not dispute her being a British Ship, but that her Pass was not of the New Cut; and the Time for the old Passes continuing, being expired, they condemned the Goods, notwithstanding the Biddeford Man of War was then here, whose Commander used his utmost Endeavours with the Dey to prevent it. The Ship and the People on board her, were all released.
